MR. CANDLER WAS MISQUOTED. He States His Views—The River and Harbon Bill—A Southeast Georgia Pro-test—Georgia News.

WASHINGTON, August 10. -[Special.]-To-day has been dull indeed in both branches of congress. The announcement yesterday that both houses would adjourn over from today until Monday was the cause of a general exo-dus of statesmen to a cooler clime to spend the next two days, and consequently the capitol

RIVER AND HARBOR BILL. Contrary to expectations, the president did not return the river and harbor bill to the house today. On account of adjournment over until Monday it is understood that tomorrow not being a strictly legislative day the period of ten days it is permitted to remain in the hands of the president does not expire until Monday, and consequently the friends of the bill yet think it will be signed, or else become a law without Mr. Cleveland's signature.

Mr. Blanchard, chairman of the house com-mittee, says the president has assured him the bill will not be vetoed, but notwithstanding this, considerable anxiety is felt by friends of the measure as to its safety.

HE WAS MISUNDERSTOOD

Mr. Candler said today that the Critic had slightly misunderstood him yesterday and as it was printed in The Constitution of today, I give Mr. Candlers corrections. He said that if the senate passed a fair bill amounting to any material reduction of the tariff and reducing duties on rice and sugar, the two chief southern products, in the same proportion that dutiable articles were reduced and at same time repealing the tobacco tax and the tax on fruit brandies, he would vote for the bill and believes the house ought to do it. However he says he didn't say the house would do it, for he had no means of knowing what it would

Mr. Springer says he will make another at-tempt to get the Oklahoma bill up on Tuesday. He says there are one hundred thousand peo-ple awaiting the passage of this bill to rush in the territory, and he believes within three years it will have sufficient population to be admitted as a state. He seems to have no doubt of the bill passing if he can get a quorum together; but Major Barnes seems determined to defeat it, and will not let it go through until a quorum is present.

A GEORGIA PROTEST AND NOTES. Senator Brown today introduced a memorial from citizens of southeast Georgia against any from citizens of southeast Georgia against any reduction of duty on rice.

Major Barnes introduced a petition from citizens of Augusta asking the passage by the house of the Freedman's bank bill.

Naval Cadet George F. Cooper, of Georgia, has been promoted to an ensign in the navy.

Henry S. Swearingon, of Georgia, has been promoted to a fourteen bundred dollar position in the interior department.

Major Barnes and Judge Crisp took advantage of the adjournment over until Monday to fix their families at Winchester.

SENATE ROUTINE,

A Number of Eills Considered and Some Passed.

Washington, August 10.—The senate bill for the disposal of Fort Brooke military reservation, 148 acres at Tampa, Fla., twenty-five acres thereof for a park, eight acres for United States public buildings, and the remainder to be sold and the proceeds paid into the treasury having been reached, Mr. Call offered an amendment to appropriate the proceeds of sale to the establishment of a free industrial school in Tampa. This was rejected, veas 19. in Tampa. This was rejected, yeas 19,

Mr. Hawley called attention to the fact that the bill had the same provisions as those on which the president had vetoed a bill granting a part of a military reservation to the city of Tacoma, Washington territory, for park purposes. Mr. Hawley moved to substitute the word "allotted" for the word "granted," so as to meet the president's objection in the Tacoma case.

Mr. Dolph criticised the president's veto in Mr. Holph Criticised the presents veto in the Tacoma case, and gave notice that he would discuss it more fully hereafter. Without disposing of the Tampa bill, the senate proceeded to the consideration of fisheries treaty in open executive session.

Mr. Frye gave notice that on atennay next he would move to go into open executive ses-sion, immediately after the morning business, and so from day to day next week until a con-clusion was reached on the treaty. Mr. Stewart gave notice that as soon as the fisheries treaty was disposed of he would press the bill for the admission of the state of Wash-ington.

Mr. Call, who was to speak on the treaty, All, who was to speak on the treaty, said he was not prepared to do so today and suggested that the matter go over till Monday. Consent wrs given, and the senate resumed the consideration of legislative business under unanimous consent to proceed with the bills on the calendar, to which no objections should be made. The Tampa bill was informally laid aside.

The senate bill reducing postage on fourthclass mail matter to one cent for every three ounces having been reached, Mr. Beck offered a substitute for it, making the postage on first-class mail matter one cent an ounce from the first of January, 1889. Without action, the bill was, at the suggestion of Mr. Sawyer, kid aside. The senate bill to regulate the commerce carried on by telegraph, was passed without discussion, objection or division. This was the bill introduced by Mr. Spooner on the 25th of January, 1888, and reported back from the committee on interstate commerce (with

The conference report on the bill to aid state soldiers' homes was presented and agreed to.

JAMIE'S RETURN.

August Report of the Department of Agri Washington, August 10.—The August report of the department of agriculture shows a small reduction in the condition of cotton in the Carolinas, Alabama and Louisiana, and an advance in Florida, Texas, Arkansas and Tennessee. The averages of Georgia and Mississippi are unchanged: The general average is 87.3 against 86.7 a month ago and 93.3 last August. The figures by states are: Virginia 84, North Carolina 82, South Carolina 84, Georgia 90, Forida 92, Alabama 90, Mississippi 92, Levisiana 90, Toroca 79, Alabama 90, Mississippi 93, Levisiana 90, Toroca 79, Alabama 90, Mississippi 94, Levisiana 95, Mississippi 95, Levisiana 96, Mississippi 96, sippi 92, Louisiana 90, Texas 79, Arkansas 93,

There has been an excess of rain until recently. A drought of short duration is locally indicated on the Atlantic coast, and on the gulf coast east of the Mississippi. West of the Mississippi, in northern Mississippi and western Tennessee, rains have been frequent and abundant, and the growth of plant is from medium to large. East of the state of Mississippi, the plant is compara-tively small. In nearly the entire breadth, the development is represented as later than usual, though picking was about to commence in the lower latitudes.

Cotton is almost without exception reported in sound health and vigor with as little shedding of leaves and forms as is mentioned in the most successful seasons. There is little rust, but not serious except in a few counties, mostly in Georgia and Alabama, where "black rust" prevails in certain localities. The caterpillar is present very generally in southern half of the lower tier of states; but is doing no injury except in a county or two in Florida. It is not much dreaded, being kept in limited numbers by poisoning. The boll worm is in some counties of Texas.

THE CORN CROP.

There is a small advance in the condition of corn, from 98 last month to 95.5. Rains have

There is a small advance in the condition of corn, from 93 last month to 95.5. Rains have been generally seasonable, though in excess in some districts, and deficient in some others. In Kansas, the Carolinas, Delaware and New York, the condition is reduced by local drouths. In the southwest, where drouths sometimes occur at this season, there has been an improvement and a large crop is already assured. In the corn surplus states a high condition prevails, with some advance over the figures of last month. The percentages of the states of the central valleys are: Kentucky 98, Ohio 98, Indiana 99, Illinois 99, Iowa 98, Missouri 94, Kansas 91, and Nebraska 96. There will be a heavy crop in this region, as is usually and naturally expect-

Nebraska 96. There will be a heavy crop in this region, as is usually and naturally expected in a seasonable year following one of extreme drouth. A high condition of maize also prevails in the northern border states and territories, Dakota standing lowest at 84.

THE CONDITION OF WHEAT.

Spring wheat has fallen from its high position of a month ago. The chinch bug stands at the head of the disasters reported, involving more or less Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa and Nebraska, and in places doing seriou damage. High temperature, excessive rains, blights, rusts and army worms olights, rusts and army worms are reported evidently seriously educing the general condition. Dakota stands reducing the general condition. Dakota stands highest, with an average of 91, a loss of 7 points. The reported yields run an extreme range, from a few bushels to forty per acro. The reduction of the per centage in Minnesota is from 94 to 85; in Wisconsis, from 91 to 83; in Iowa, from 97 to 84; in Nebraska, from 95 to 84. The crop in Washington, Colorado and other territories, and of New England is good, and it is fair in northern Illinois, northern New York, and in the higher latitudes or altitudes of the winter wheat states. The general condition has been reduced from 95.9 to 87.3 during July. This exhibit does not include modifying changes in the first part of August. The harvest was about to commence in some districts, and in others would not be ready till the 20th and 25th instant.

the 20th and 25th instant.

There are no estimates of winter wheat after threshing as yet, but the voluntary remarks of reporters make the yield better than the early promise in all states that produce much of a crop. Cases of heavy yields are reported.

THE OTHER CROPS.

The changes that have occurred in the general averages of other crops during the month are: Oats from 95.2 to 91.7; barley from 91 to 89.4; spring rice from 95.8 to 91.4; Irish potatoes from 95.7 to 93.2. The buckwheat crop, the first report in August, averages in condition 92.5.

The Casket Containing the Nation's Hero Viewed by Many.

Viewed by Many.

Washington, August 10.—At a few minutes before 8 o'clock this morning, Mrs. Sheridan, accompanied by General and Mrs. Rucker, her father and mother, Colonel Sheridan and other members of the family, entered St. Mathew's church, where the remains of the dead general lie in state.

At 8:12 a special requiem mass was celebrated by Father Kervick. At the conclusion of the service, the church was cleared and Mrs. Sheridan remained alone with her dead. As she left the church the guard resumed their places and visitors were again admitted.

A steady stream of people poured in and out of the church all day. They included all classes. Members of congress and laboring men in their every day clothes looked upon the casket containing the remains of the great commander. Those who wished to stop in the church to attend their devotions, took seats in their pews, but the time kept pressing or at times diversible in numbers and the the cauren to attend their devotions, took seats in their pews, but the time kept pressing on, at times diminishing in numbers and then again thronging the bread aisle.

THE HOUSE AT WORK.

The War Claims Bill Takes Up the Time of the Members.

Washington, August 10.—Mr. Townshend, of Illinois, submitted the conference report on the bill granting aid to statehomes for disabled volunteers, and it was agreed to. The provisions of the bill are extended to territorial homes, and its benefits are confined to homes entirely under state or territorial control.

Mr. Springer, of Illinois, gave notice that he would ask the house on Tuesday next to proceed to the further consideration of the Oklohoma bill.

The house then went into a committee of the whole, Mr. Hatch of Missouri, in the chair, on the private calendar. Almost the entire afternoon was consumed in the consideration of the war claims bill, the discussion turning upon the loyalty of the claimant. No action was taken, and the committee rose.

On motion of Mr. Cheadle, of Indiana, the senate joint resolution was passed authorizing the president to present a gold medal to Joseph Francis, in recognition of his eminent services in the construction and perfection of life-Mying appliances.

Her maiden name was Fanny Ada Sparks. Her father was General Shoarks, prior to the war a man of wealth and high social position. He was at one time comected with the New Orleans at war, "Somebody's Darling." Her first hunsband was the reputed author of that touching poem of the war, "Somebody's Darling." Her first hunsband was Augustus A. Fowlks, of New Orleans, from whom she was divorced in 1867. Three years later she married General Thomas M. Scott, who commanded the Twelfth Louisiana regiment deferson Davis and Joseph E. Johnston. It appears that Miss Sparks must have been a confederate spy, as mention is made of her being imprisoned by the federals in Vicksburg and New Orleans dering the war. Some time before her death she told an acquaintance that she had papers of great historical value which she proposed s Comparison of the Condition of American and European Laboring Men.

New York, August 10.—The steamer City of New York was boarded five miles off Sandy Hook while at anchor waiting for high tide to cross the bar, by representatives of the press who learned that the voyage was a pleasant and uneventful one and that Mr. Blaine was well and had not suffered from any sea sickness.

Mr. Blaine said he was in excellent health and that his trip had renewed his youth.

About 8 o'clock, the Starin met the City of

New York outside the narrows. The Starin turned about and both vessels slowly steamed up the bay, bow and bow. Cheer and cheer rose from the deck of the Starin, although it was yet impossible to distinguish Mr. Blaine's form among the two thousand that stood on the decks of the huge steamer.

MR. BLAINE DISCOVERED.

As the vessels neared each other Mr. Blaine's form was at last made out standing in a group of friends on the upper deck forward. As cheer after cheer arose Mr. Blaine bowed repeatedly. He was neatly dressed in a dark cutaway coat, light trousers and brown derby hat. The Chicago Blaine club's little tug had been the first to greet the steamer as it came up the bay, and clung under its wing, while the Chicago men cheered. Cappa's band, on the Starin, played "Home Again" and "Home, Sweet Home" and "Star Spangled Banner," while advancing up to the quarantine station. Then both vessels came to anchor, and as the Starin ran over under the side of the City of New York, Mr. Blaine's face and form were plainly visible to every one on board. Cheer after cheer broke forth, handkerchiefs and flags were waved, while cries, "Blaine, James G. Blaine," "No free trade," arose, and the utmost enthusiasm prevailed.

At last, at 9:15 o'clock, to the music of "Hail to the Chief," Mr. Blaine got aboard the Starin and was escorted by Whitelaw Reid

Mr. Bartlett, president of the republican club of the city of New York, then delivered an address of welcome.

MR. Blaine said in reply:

Mr. President and Gentlemen of the Republican Club and fellow citizens: To enable you to appreciate this welcome each and every one of you should be absent from home and country for the long period of fourteen months. I air sure you can have little conception of the great gratification of that instant when I saw the shores of our great republic. I cannot tell you how deeply grateful I am to be remembered in this manner by you and the assembled gentlemen. It is a seene I shall never forget. It is an occasion which I assure you appreciate from the depths of my heart. It is shadowed only by the sad event which greeted us as the first place of American news we heard—the death of General Sheridan, a man who was above party and stood for the union of the states. [Shouts of "Good!"]

With that exception, my arrival upon my native an address of welcome.

"Good?" With that exception, my arrival upon my native shore was unattended by anything but joy and happiness. The campaign on which you are about to enter, should be prefaced, if that were possible, by every voter in the United States, seeing what I have seen [good, good] and rearing what I have heard during last year. [Applause.] The progress of the campaign in the United States is viewed from the European standpoint with an interest as profound as it is in the United States. It is the opportunity of England. It is the long-wished-for, long-looked-for occasion upon which cheaper jabor and cheaper fabries of the old world expect. is the opportunity of England. It is the long-wished-for, long-looked-for-occasion upon which cheaper labor and cheaper fabrics of the old world expect to invade the new and lower the wages of American workingmen to the European standard. [Great applause.] It is not a contest of capital against capital; it is not a contest of partisan against partisan. It is much higher than either of these. It transcends all party motives. [Applause.] Whether the great mass of American citizens who earn their bread by the sweat of their brow shall be seriously reduced in their emolument from day to day—that is the whole pith and moment of this question. Anything that diverts the question from that single point is a weakening of the campaign. [Applause and cries of "Good."] I say here, as I hope to say with much more elaboration. [Loud cheering and cries of that's what we want."] I say here that wages of the "Good." I say here, as I nope to say with much more elaboration. [Loud cheering and cries of 'that's what we want." I say here that wages of the American laborer cannot be reduced except with the consent and votes of the American laborer himself. The appeal ties to him. It comes to his door and asks him whether with the great power of franchise and the great majority he possesses in his own hands, he is willing, for himself and his associates, his children and his children's children to take that fatal step, at bidding of an American congress and an American president who are governed by that element which sought to distroy this nation. But gentlemen, it is not time for a political speech. My beart is too full to enter at this time on a lengthened argument. In this moment of welcome and joy, getting home to old scenes and old friends, I must be allowed to enjoy the pleasant emotions of the occasion. I can only add my fervent thanks to each and every member of the cloth and to all my friends for the generous and joyous welcome they have teadered to me in the labor of New York.

Mr. Blaine was escorted to the ladies' saloon, where he received a number of his friends. In a little while he ascended to the saloon on the upper deck, where he received the congratulations of all, having a pleasant word for all who greeted him. While there he was handed an address by Edward Fitzwilliam, of Boston, repgreeted him. THE CAMPAIGN AND HIS HEALTH.

When asked as to what part he would take in the campaign, Mr. Blaine said he could say nothing at present. He did not think he would go outside of the state of Maine until after the te election there on the second Monday in September.

When asked about his health he at first said he was perfectly well and then added, laughingly: "That's a question I haven't answered ingly: "That's a question I haven't answered in three years."

To a question as to the political aspect his reply was that he did not care to say anything then, further than that he had said in his

He said they had three days of fog and, what land lubbers might call, rough weather, but they had nothing to complain of. The steamer was moving along, meanwhile, with the band playing and its passengers indulging in frequent choers for Blaine. All along the river it was escorted by the police boat patrol, the Chicago Blaine club's tug, and other vessels, while a constant series of shrill salutes from steam whistles from boats which passed, marked its progress to the pier at Twenty-second street and North river.

Twenty-second street and North river.

ARRIVAL AT THE PIER.

The police landed from patrol and preserved order, while others already stationed at the pier prevented the large crowd waiting in the street from surging in.

Mr. Blaine was escorted to an open carriage, and was at once driven to the Fifth Avenue hotel. Mrs. Blaine, Miss Blaine, Miss Podge, Walker Blaine, Mr. and Mrs. James G. Blaine, Jr., and others, were rapidly driven to the hotel in other carriages, awaiting the party on the pier.

CARRIER PIGEONS.

Eyents as they occurred on the boat from the moment Mr. Blaine boarded it were quickly recorded and sent to the associated press by carrier pigeons. The pigeon, which Mrs. James G. Blaine, Jr., dispatched at quarantine earlier in the morning arrived at its destination with its message within half an hour from the time it left her hand. The second pigeon was sent away by Mrs. Carson Lake and the third by Mrs. Alexander Sullivan, of the Chicago Tribone.

The hotel was crowded this meralng by prominent republicans, ntembers of the republican clubs and others who had gathered to greet Mr. Blaine on his arrival there. On the sidewalk and in the street great crowds were assembled, but when Mr. Blaine drove up to the Twenty-third street entrance, shortly after 110-clock, they quickly president of the board of health at Tampa, and hotel. "Just a word to thank you for your tribute.

It is the grandest sight and the most cheerful sound I have heard for a year."

Mr. Blaine has decided to remain in this city until Monday morning, when he will leave for Maine.

The Brening Exercises.

The large grand stand in Madison square was again packed tonight, this time being to serenade Blaine. An address was read to Blaine by Healy. In replying Blaine said: It would be considerable egotism on my part to take this magnificent demonstration as personal, altogether to myself. It nather signifies the great popular interest in the question upon which I am supposed, at least, to have a consistent record and an extract zeal. [Applause.] And you have before you a contest in which that great issue is to be settled by the American people, for perhaps an indefinite period, one way or the other. The year 1887 was a prosperous one, and the president, at its close, proposed a radical change in the industrial system which had produced that great prosperity; and since that day there has been confusion in the commerce and manufactures of the United States. [Applause.] The question before the American people s whether he and his administration shall be sustained in that movement against the republicans, having bestems and having nominated the best The Evening Exercises. sine that day there has been confusion in the commerce and manufactures of the United States. [Applause.] The question before the American people s whether he and his administration shall be sustained in that movement against the republicans, having best cause and having nominated the best men. [Applause.] They have given to you for president a man of sound experience, a man of he role record in the war, a man of great printy of character, a man of great firmness and worthy of the best days of the administration in this country; and you have associated with him a man whom to New Yorkers I need not further describe than to say his name is Levi P. Morton, [Applause.] A man of the most generous character. of intelligent comprehension of affairs, of widest and most statesman like views on all public questions pending before the American people. Against this you have two gentlemen of whom I would not speak in terms other than those of entire personal respect. Of the vice-president other than that in him I have a triend of many years standing. I am a personal admirer of Judge Thurman, but I beg you to observe that at a critical period in this country. Vice-President George M. Dallas, on easting his vote in a tied senate, destroyed the protective tariff of 1842. Today the senate of the United States has, or on March-4th next will have, thirty-two senators from the solid south and six democratic senators from the north—I in the meantime you do not stop them—precisely one half, and Mr. Thurman will be in position to re-enact the vote of George M. Dallas in 192. Therefore, however amiable the man may be, and however able he is, the worse will be his inditance before the American people. [Applause.]

Now, gentlemen, I know that in discussing the question of protective tariff we are always pointing out what England is doing. I have lately been in England for some months, and I found a very great difference of opinion upon almost all questions, They are about divided upon what you call the Irish question; they are about div [Loud applause.] If you will agree to live in a poorhouse, and cetaes poor food and receive as low wages as the people in England receive, we can just produce as cheap goods as the democratic administration. But it will be otherwise if you wish to better the condition of your childrens; children, if you want the industrial system of protected interests that prevail in this country now to be maintained.

I will not in this campaign stop to argue the question upon any other basis. I have no gersonality to inche and server in the point of the laboring for a first to the building of a first story.

[Applause.] Now, gentlemen, you represent a critical state: you represent the state of New York. Your votes are to tell in that issue. Your votes can be decisive upon that one issue. Do not be diverted from that one question by side issues. Do not be misied by petry squabbles upon this or that small issue or upon personal questions of abuse on one hand or the other, but give your votes as independent laboring men and give them for the interest of your own homes, of your own fresides, and thereby for the great interest of the great republic. [Immense cheering.] I never, Mr. Chairman, thought of that republic as I do tonight. [Cheers.] I have seen the other side. I have deyoted many of the last fourteen months to seeing the condition of labor and laboring men in the other hemisphere, and I say, without fear of contradiction, that in no country of Europe, in no part of Europe, or part of any country, is the condition of labor comparable to that which it holds in the United States. [Applause.] Are you willing to give up that position, or are you willing to maintain it? [Cries of "Yes!"] Yourcan maintain it by a strong puil, and a puil altegether, for Harrison and Morton. The Engineers, Firemen, Brakemen and Switchmen Form an Alliance.

St. Louis, Mo., August 10.—The meeting of the chairmen of the grievance committees of the Brotherhood of Engineers, which has been in session for the past two days, adjourded this evening, and Chief Arthur has gone home. The meeting was a secret one. It was learned today, however, that the object of the conference was twofold—respecting status of the "Q" strike and to consult regarding the proposed amalgamation of the engineers, firemen, brakemen and switchmen. It is given on authority of a prominent engineer, and one who is very near to Chief Arthur, that a strong alliance has been formed between the orders named. Chief Sargeant was present at the meeting and all other branches of railroad employes had authorized representatives on the floor. Resolutions were adopted indorsing Chiefs Arther and Sargeant and it was decided to continue the "Q" strike and to increase the pay of strikers from the strikers' fund se that they was make provisions for the was decided to continue the "Q" strike and to increase the pay of strikers from the strikers' fund so that they may make provisions for the winter. The engineers will hereafter receive $60 per month and firemen $40. Plans are in progress in regard to the strike, but no one would reveal what they are. Mr. Hoge, of the grievance committee of the "Q" road, said nothing definite has been decided upon and that "so far as the strike is concerned we rest just where we did before."

since yesterday over the reports of yellow fever at Jacksonville. The city authorities of Montgomery have acted on the advice of the board of health and established a rigid quar-antine against Jacksonville and other points in Florida where fever is reported. A full force of quarantine officers were appointed by the chief of police and sworn today, and de-tailed to watch all incoming trains that might bring passengers or baggage from the stricken districts. The old quarantine station at Mo Ghee's switch, nine miles south of the city, has. been fitted up today for regular service, and competent officers placed in charge. It is re-ported here today that there are ten cases of yellow fever at Jacksonville. Pensacola and Mobile have also quarantined against Jacksonville.

Wilmington, Quarantines, Wilmington, N. C., August 10.—The health authorities of this city have declared an inland quarantine against Jacksonville, for-bidding any persons coming from Jacksonville or towns south of that point, from entering here.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., August 10 .- The Mayflower house, the center of infection, corner of Forsyth and Ocean streets, was burned this evening by order of the board of health. Probably one or two other buildings that can-not he safely disinfected will be burned. The citizens are organizing and will aid the health authorities in the most energetic measures to prevent the disease becoming general. Strong hope is entertained of success. One new case was reported up to 6 o'clock this evening making nine in all, and one death, that of J. J. Perkins. Captain Low R. Tuttie, Florida passenger agent of the Louisville and Nashville railroad, died at Pablo Beach today of yellow fever. His was the only case known at Pablo. An official bulletin is expected later.

Our telegraph office closes at midnight tonight Removing the Marines. WASHINGTON, August 10. - [Special.] - Com modore Walker and Surgeon General Brown have recommended to the navy departmen the removal of a company of marines from Pensacola to Atlanta on account of the yellow fever there. Secretary Whitney has conceived the idea that the company is desirous of going to Atlanta more for pleasure than anything else, and it is probable if the marines are removed at all they will be sent to Norfolk.

S200,000 to be Baid out under the discretion of the secretary of treasury, for the prevention and suppression of yellow fever in the interstate commerce of the United States. It also authorizes the surgeon-general of the marine hospital service, on the request of the governor of any state, to seize and destroy under conditions and regulations to be prescribed by the secretary of the treasury, any infected personal or other property which is communicating infection and disease in interstate commerce. This condemned property, it is provided, shall be paid for out of money appropriated by the resolution. A letter to Senator Call from Surgeon General Hamilton, dated August 9th, says that he has conferred with Assistant Mainard, and that the "treasury department is of the opinion that no existing law will authorize the destruction of any infected houses in the state; but if that no existing law will authorize the destruc-tion of any infected houses in the state; but if congress should make an appropriation to re-imburse the state of Florida or the individual owner for the destruction of any house deemed infected, so that disinfection could not be effectively funigated, there would be no objection to the officers of this service acting as appraisers to determine the value of proper-ty and to superintend its destruction. It would probably be necessary for the governor of the state to give an order for the destruction of any property. An order for the destruction of bedding and clothing infected beyond effect-ive funigation has this day been given.

answer to questions he said: "Yes, I am fleeing from the yellow fever and you will not blame me when I tell you that I lost three brothers and two children in New Orleans ten years ago when yellow fever was epidemic in that city. All of them died within one week. I had a slight attack but got well enough to leave the stricken city. I was in Jacksonville a few days ago on business. I have large in-terests in St. Augustine and Sanford, but reside in Los Angeles, California most of the time. I went to Jacksonville just one week ago and remained there three days. A friend of mine came to me and advised me to quit the city without delay. He informed me that there undoubtedly existed yellow fever in the city and he said he believed it would be epi-demic in less than a week. There were a number of bad cases near my hotel. I took my friend's advice and did not stand upon the order of my going but went by the first train. When I reached St. Augustine I found the whole city scared. At least fifty people hurried away in various directions. Some of us came a round about way; we came by Montgomery. Our train was stopped before we entered the city and officers went through the coaches to see that there were no cases of yellow fever on board. We were subjected to a good deal of annoyance and delay. Every train that leaves Florida will be crowded with frightened leaves Florida will be crowded with frightened refugees."

Several others who came with Mr. Brockett corroborated his statements. All of them express the opinion that yellow fever will prevail all over Florida. They declare that the inhabitants are full of terror and are fleeing from the state as rapidly as they can get away.

About fifty refugees from Florida arrived in Atlanta yesterday. Most of them hurried through the city. A party of fourteen went up the Air-Line, about as many went to Marietta and a small party proceeded to Salt Springs. The others remained in Atlanta.

Atlanta Free From Danger. "Thank God that Atlanta enjoys immunity from yellow fever, cholera and other scourges such as depopulate the cities along the sea

Thus ejaculated Dr. Holliday, as he stood in the courthouse surrounded by a group of people who were talking about the dread vis-itant, whose advent in Jacksonville has produced such consternation.

"Do you know much about yellow fever, doctor?" was asked by a representative of "Yes: I know a good deal about it, and one of the things I know is that it cannot live in Atlanta. If it should be brought here it could not spread. I well remembe that when yellow fever was epidemic in Memphis and Chattanooga several persons afflicted with the horrible disease were brought to Atlanta. They had senuine yellow fever, with the fatal black vomit. Without exception they died, but nobody caught the disease, which showed conclusively that yellow fever cannot spread in Atlanta. Our atmosphere is too pure for epidemics."

"Have you ever had any personal experience with yellow fever?" was asked Dr. Holliday.
"Yes," he continued, "I have been where there was yellow fever, but I never had it myself. The first I knew about it was in 1832; in Augusta. I was there attending medicar lever ures. It was late in the summer when the distures. It was the opinion of such case showed itself. It was the opinion of such distinguished physicians as Dr. Dugas and old Dr. Anthony that it originated there and was not imported. The summer had been very dry and many of the water courses almost dried up. A stream into which poured the filth from the city became nearly as dry as a country road. The members of the city council who were not solons by any means contil who were not solons by any means concountry road. The members of the city council, who were not solons by any means, conceived the idea that it would be a good thing to turn under the debris. Despite the most vehement protests from old Dr. Anthony and others, the workmen carried out the orders of the city council. As they plied their picks and shovels a bot effluvia was emitted from the plied their picks and shovels a hot effluvia was emitted from the steaming bed of the stream, and the workmen had to wear thick boots to keep their feet from burning. While this work was under way the laborers were many of them taken down with a fearful malady, which proved to be nothing more or less than yellow fever. They died by the score, and soon the fever became infectious and spread all over thesite. came infectious and spread all over the city. The death rate was heavy and all who could leave the stricken city did so. The experience of Augusta proves that the fever can originate in a city and it is not necessary to be im-ported."

THE CAUSE OF THE AUGUSTA EPIDEMIC. "Yes," remarked Judge Richard H. Clark, 'yellow fever sometimes is started in a city by local causes. I recall some facts about that plague to which Dr. Holliday has referred. It was a remarkable thing that while the fever raged in Augusta there never while the lever raged in Augusta there never was a single case in the sand hills, only a few miles from the city. People could stay all day in Augusta attending to their business and could then go out to the sand hills and sleep in security. But if one of them risked staying in security. But if one of them risked staying in town over night be was certain to be attacked with fever. In 1839 it was again epidemic in Augusta, and the death rate was fearfully large. In 1853 yellow fever began in Texas, and it went along the gulf, touching most of the cities, but none of the seacoast towns were affected. In 1854 it started at St. Augustine and followed the ceast, taking in every town except Brunswick, and ending its career at Wilmington, N. C. The next year all these towns were skipped, and Norfolk, Va., was attacked. In 1876 the fever struck Brunswick. In 1878 there was an epidemic in New Orleans, Memphis, New Grenada, Chattanooga, and many small town in Mississippi. Thousands of people fled toward the Georgia towns, and many of them refugeed here in Atlanta. In that way not a few cases came here. Perhaps half a dozen persons who came from the fever stricken districts with the fever on them died after reaching Atlanta. But nobody ever feared that the disease would take root here."

"The case of Dr. Grant.

"There is absolutely no reason why anybody in Atlanta should feel the slightest alarm," remarked Judge Strong. The fever cannot possibly live here. I can recall many instances where persons having yellow fever were brought to Atlanta. They died, were buried the same as other people, and yet there was not the slightest fear that the disease would attack any one else. I remember that Dr. Grant, brother of Colonel Grant, was attacked with fever in Cincinnati, I believe, and was brought to Atlanta. He had an unmistakable case of yellow fever. He died in about twenty-four hours and was buried here. I attended the funeral. There were several other cases of a similar nature, which I can recall, but I do not remember names."

"My yellow fever experience," remarked town over night he was certain to be attach

"How many cases were there?"

"Well, I do not know that I should answer?"

"Tell all you know! said his companion, "it is gone too far now to suppress it."

"There must have been twenty cases of fever in the city on Wednesday," he continued. "I have just received a private telegram announcing the death of Lou R. Tuttle, Jacksonville agent of the Louisville and Nashville road, and three others. I have lived in Jacksonville for seventeen years, and never knew the city to be so stirred up before. "Dr. Westmoreland indignantly repelled his timid friends, assuring them that he would stay with the sufferer until he either died or got well. Mr. Brandt was conveyed to Dr. Westmoreland's house. As soon as the neighbors learned of this, they protested vigorously. They insisted that the man with yellow fever should be taken to an out of town pesthouse. Dr. Westmoreland refused to do this. The terrified neighbors then had recourse to the authorities, who tried to get the dector to remove his patient. This he positively refused to do. The officers threatened to take Brandt away by force. The faithful and fearless old physician got out his trusty old shotgun and told the officers that if they took Brandt out of his house, they would have to take him away over his dead body; that he would shoot the first man that attempted it. This dismayed the officers, and they gave Dr. Westmoreland no further trouble. In two days Brandt died, and his body was given a decent burial by the big hearted physician who had befriended him."

In the Death of Maxwell, His Murderer.

TWO MEN FROM ONE SCAFFOLD

Closing Scenes in the Life of a Noted Criminal-Landgraff and Maxwell Hanged Together.

St. Louis, August 10.-Maxwell was hanged at 8:56 o'clock this morning.

Maxwell was hanged in company with Henry Landgraff who murdered his sweetheart on March 5th, 1885. Landgraff was sentenced to hang on April 29th, last year, but he, like Maxwell, has been making a desperate effort to save himself, and has had the benefit of appeals, stays of execution and respites. The execution was postponed two hours from the original time set this morning, on Maxwell's account, Landgraff sharing in extention of life.

GOVERNOR MOOREHOUSE FIRM.

At 8:10, Lawyer Martin, of counsel for Maxwell, received from his colleague, Fauntberry, who was in Jefferson City, the following telegram, which was delivered to Maxwell:

The governor received from Minister West a telegram, but he persists in the same position. Ho'd as long as possible, as we may hear in time. My heartlelt sympathy to accused and loved ones. Wire his father.

The receipt of this telegram created quite a ensation, as it was the general opinion in and bout the jail that the governor would grant at least a brief stay.

HOW IT WAS RECEIVED.

Maxwell received it indifferently, the ashen

Maxwell received it indifferently, the ashen hue on his face growing deeper.

At 8:47 Sheriff Harrington, preceded by a detail of police, entered the inner yard of the jail. The sheriff entered Maxwell's cell, where he and Landgraff had been placed together, and announced the final moment had arrived, and Maxwell paled and pulled his fingers nervously. His was the first death warrant read and he stood up and heard his doom calmly, though he was plainly growing weaker all the time. While his arms were being pinioned, Maxwell bit his lower lip and gulped several times.

being pinioned, Maxwell bit his lower he and gulped several times.

Landgraff received the warrant and pinion ing as stolidly as a man well could.

THE PROCESSION TO THE SCAFFOLD was then formed, Father Tihan walking between Maxwell and Landgraff, preceded by Sheriff Harrington and deputies, and followed by police, reporters and witnesses.

As Maxwell passed through the inner yard he walked firmly but slowly. There was a wonderful change between the apparently unconcerned man putting a cigarette and the one wonderful change between the apparently unconcerned man puffing a cigarette and the one en route to his death. His face locked pinched and drawn, of an ashen hue, and his eyes were swellen. He glanced about piteously. His lips twitched, and his appearance was calculated to awaken pity of even those who were firmly convinced that he ought to die. Landgraff locked and moved like a log, with a half smile and half sneer on his face.

There was no time lost in reaching the scaf-There was no time lost in reaching the scar-fold, which the condemned men ascended without assistance. Maxwell was placed under the noose next to Twelfth street. Father Tihan read prayers, and Maxwell was then asked if he had anything to say. In an almost inaudible tone he responded "no." Landgraff merely shook his head. The black caps were heing drawn when Landgraff slipned hackmerely snow his head. The observable being drawn when Landgraff slipped backward, but promptly recovered. There was an awful lock of despair on Maxwell's face as the cap hid it from view, and his knees showed weakness. The nooses were adjusted quickly, and at 8:56 THE DROP FELL.

Landgraff never moved, nor did a muscle twitch. Not so with Maxwell. When he fell his breast heaved convulsively and his limbs were drawn upward, while the spectators were checked by a stream of blood requiring down the right breast of his coat, which was afterward found to have been caused by a cut on ward found to have been caused by a cut on nose inflicted by rope in some mysterious way.

Landgraff was pronounced dead in eleven and a half minutes. Maxwell's struggles continued for fourteen minutes, when he was pronounced dead by the attending physician.

Landgraff was cut down at 9:12; Maxwell at 9:15. The bedies were reproved to the Landgraft was cut down at 9:12; Maxwell at 9:15. The bodies were removed to the morgue office and photographed, after which a postmortem was held. The postmortem showed that the necks of both Maxwell and Landgraff were broken. Maxwell's nose was broken and it is presumed he struck some part of the galiows in the fall. Some of the smaller bones in his neck were fractured.

TENNESSEE JUSTICE

Meted Out to a Negro Who Confessed to a Terrible Crime.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., August 10.—[Special.]—
The negro, Amos Miller, who raped Mrs. Scott in Mur a, county, was hanged by a mob in the courthouse at Franklin this morning.

It was thought best by the officers of the court not to attempt to try him at the regular court not to attempt to try him at the regular session of the court, and it was accordingly arranged to have a special session for his trial. Miller was this morning taken from Nashville, where he had been for safe keeping, and arraigned in court. The mob had promised the officers of the court that if Miller was given a trial at once, they would make no given a trial at once, they would make no constration, but the mob was organized and n readiness for action whenever the leaders gave the signal.

Very soon after court convened the leaders understood that the attorneys for the defense were preparing to make a motion for a change of venue and sent word to that effect to the mob. venue and sent word to that effect to the mob. The court was proceeding to take up the case, and the attorney-general had announced himself ready for the state, when the defendant's counsel applied for a continuance and proceeded to write an affidavit.

At once an organized body of about fifty men, well armed, advanced to the courthouse, entered the courtrous seized the perfect and the courtrous seized.

men, well armed, advanced to the courthouse, entered the courtroom, seized the negro, and swung him to a bannister railing in the building, almost in the very presence of the judge and the officers of the court. An effort was made to prevail upon the lynchers to desist, but they were determined not to countenance anything that had the appearance of delay, and summarily executed their conception of justice.

No one was allowed to interfere. A brother No one was allowed to interfere. A brother of Miller was in the courthouse and witnessed the hanging, but made no demonstation. Mrs. Scott was present at the trial, but upon notification left a few minutes before the arrival of the mob. None of the mob were disguised, and when they had executed their vengeance they exists.

and when they had executed their vengeance they quietly dispersed. Intense excitement prevails throughout the town and vicinty, but the result is nothing more than was expected by many of the people familiar with the details of the crime.

It will be remembered that Miller visited the residence of Mrs. Scott and asked for something to eat. Securing some bread and milk, Miller proceeded a short distance from the house and concealed himself in the bushes, where he remained until he observed Mr. Scott leaving his home. Returning Miller attacked Mrs. Scott and accomplished his design. The News of the State Collected

And Put in Convenient Shape-Some of the -An Old Chain Found.

A remarkable freak of nature has been found in Houston county. The Perry Journal says that a chicken with hair instead of feathers is indeed a curiosity, and there are many exists Last Saturday we were shown such a chicken—at least it so appeared at first glance.
A close examination disclosed the fact that the feathers were such as to closely resemble course hairs. The chicken was black and white in color; and was traded for in the county by Mr. James Joice.

Mr. Osborn Watson, one of the most suc-cessful farmers of the Upper 11th district, Houston county, tells how he "tricked" two hawks not long since. Mrs. Watson felt great pride in 26 young turkeys that were growing finely. A couple of bawks took a fancy to these tarkeys and killed all of them except nine. Mr. Watson then rubbed strychnine and syrup on the back part of the head and neck of each turkey. Next day two turkeys were missing, and a dead turkey and a dead hawk were found together in a field. The other hawk has not since been seen.

And the Lincolnton News tells how chickens have been visited by more terrible enemies than hawks. It had been evident that a nocturnel marander was infesting the poultry yards for some time, young fowls disappearing every night; but he could not be caught up with until one night last week, when he seized an old hen, which gave the alarm. All hands with degs and torches, immediately responded, and when we reached the fowthouse there was what resembled a bea constrictor, with the hen completely wound up in his coil, having swallowed the head and neck. He had overrated his capacity, and seemed to be waiting for his morsel to shrink; but when old "Nig" appeared he was soon dispatched. He was not quite as large as a stove-pipe, but measured nearly seven feet, and was not at all slender.

J. B. Collins, of Johnson station, came to Jesup Tuesday night on the Jesup express. About 11 o'clock he retired to his room at the Jesup hotel. About 3 o'clock Wednesday him lying on the street in a pool of blood. The supposition is that he came out of his room and lay on the piazza, which is about twenty feet high, and in rolling about fell, striking the edge of the lower piazza. He was moved to the hotel and physicians immediately summoned, who did all in their power to relieve the sufferer. Mr. Collins lingered for a while and died. He leaves a wife and three chil-

Now and then, in making excavations, the workmen find curious things. The Sumter Republican states that Mr. Joe Chambless, several weeks ago, was boring a well for a man a few miles from Americus, and in pumping it out, drew up with the sand about a dozen links of something that looked like a rusty chain. hanging on to a bit of wood. The well was over staty feet deep, and he says he sat down and puzzled his brains for an hour trying to solve the mystery of how it got sixty feet be low the surface of the eacth there. After a few hours' exposure it dried up and crumbled away. He thinks that in the long past some vessel may have been wrecked, and this piece may have been swept under the earth by some current or stream and deposited where he res.

The Greenesboro Herald and Journal publishes this: A most remarkable case came last week before Dr. John L. Durham, of Woodville. A gentleman named Lord, from Alabama, had some days before a fly to suddenly enter his ear, from which it was promptly extricated. The insect then as suddenly disappeared. On that night Mr. Lord experienced a sensation of itching in his ear. This grew in intensity and pain until it was unbearabl He went to Athens for relief, but remedie applied failed to afford it. Coming to Wood-ville, he stated his case to Dr. Durham. The acute pain had nearly by this time thrown the gentleman into convulsions: Dr. Durhan after applying an anasthetic to the ear, insorted a copious drench, which brought out no less than eleven well developed maggots, wrig-

The other day quite a serious accident hanpened to Judge J. T. Dolvin, of Greene county. The Sun says that while leading some fod-der a bundle fell between the wagen and the heels of the mules. The judge stooped to pick up the bundle, when one of the mules kicked him over the left eye, cutting the flesh to the skull. The judge was not knocked down, however, but rose and walked unaided to the house, a distance of a quarter of a mile. When he arrived there he was very bloody but he would not send for a physician, but dressed the wound himself. It was a narrow escape, but the judge is now all right.

Charles Anderson, an old colored man in Pulaski county, was shot Monday night by Hilary Nelson, another colored man. They had had a quarrel Sunday. On Monday night Hilary and several other negroes went over to whe Anderson lived and renewed the quarrel, and finally shot him in the back.

The jury commissioners have been busy during the past week revising the jury lists. In some counties it was a hard task, occupying several days.

The people of the Daviston vicinity witness ed a double burial a few days since at Frien ship cemetery the circumstances surrounding which are singular, and are about these: Two mothers gave birth to twins about the sam time, one of each of the twins died on the sam day and about the same hour, and they wer buried at the same place at about the sam time by the same people, and yet their parents live in opposite directions from the cometery.

There is one scupperneng vine in the garder of an Athens gentleman which several years ago produced 100 gallons of wine. The owner nks he will beat this record the coming senson, as the vine is unusually full. It was planted about thirty years ago by Professo Rutherford, and now covers about a quarter of an acre of ground.

And Put in Convenient Shape-Some of the Curious Tirings-A Hairy Chicken -An Old Chain Found.

A remarkable freak of nature has been found in Houston county. The Perry Journal says that a chicken with hair instead of feathers is indeed a curiosity, and there are many who could not be convinced that such a thing exists. Last Saturday we were shown such a Chicken—at least it so appeared at first glance.

A close examination disclosed the fact that the feathers were such as to closely resemble occurse hairs. The chicken was black and white in color, and was traded for in the county by Mr.

Mr. Osborn Watson, one of the most suc cessful farmers of the Upper 11th district, Houston county, tells how he "tnicked" two hawks not long since. Mrs. Watson felt great pride in 26 young turkeys that were growing finely. A couple of hawks took a fancy to these turkeys and killed all of them except nine. Mr. Watson then rubbed strychnine and syrup on the back part of the head and neck of each turkey. Next day two turkeys were missing, and a dead turkey and a dead hawk were found together in a field. The other hawk has not since been seen.

And the Lincolnton News tells how chickens have been visited by more terrible enemies than hawks. It had been evident that a nocturnal marauder was infesting the poultry yards for some time, young fowls disappearing every night; but he could not be caught up with until one night last week, when he seized an o'd hen, which gave the alarm. All hands, with dogs and torches, immediately responded, and when we reached the fowthouse there was what resembled a bea constrictor, with the hen completely wound up in his coil, having swallowed the head and neck. He had overrated his capacity, and seemed to be waiting for his morsel to shrink; but when old "Nig" appeared he was soon dispatched. He was not quite as large as a stove-pipe, but measured nearly seven feet, and was not at all slender.

J. B. Collins, of Johnson station, came to Jesup Tuesday night on the Jesup express. About 11 o'clock he retired to his room at the Jesup hotel. About 3 o'clock Wednesday morning, his brother-in-law, J. H. Price, found him lying on the street in a pool of blood. The supposition is that he came out of his room and lay on the piazza, twhich is about twenty feet high, and in rolling about fell, striking the edge of the lower piazza. He was moved to the hotel and physicians immediately summoned, who did all in their power to relieve the sufferer. Mr. Collins lingered for a while and died. He leaves a wife and three chil-

Now and then, in making excavations, the workmen find curious things. The Sumter Republican states that Mr. Joe Chambless, several weeks ago, was boring a well for a man a few miles from Americus, and in pumping it out, drew up with the sand about a dozen links of something that looked like a rusty chain, hanging on to a bit of wood. The well was over staty feet deep, and he says he sat down and puzzled his brains for an hour trying to solve the mystery of how it got sixty feet below the surface of the earth there. After a few hours' exposure it dried up and crumbled away. He thinks that in the long past some vessel may have been wrecked, and this piece may have been swept under the earth by some current or stream and deposited where he res-

The Greenesboro Ferald and Journal publishes this: A most remarkable case came last week before Dr. John L. Durham, of Woodville. A gentleman named Lord, from Alabama, had some days before a fly to suddenly enter his ear, from which it was promptly extricated. The insect then as suddenly disappeared. On that night Mr. Lord experienced applied failed to afford it. Coming to Woodville, he stated his case to Dr. Durham. pened to Judge J. T. Dolvin, of Greene county. The Sun says that while loading some fedder a bundle fell between the wagon and the heels of the mules. The judge stooped to pick up the bundle, when one of the mules kicked him over the left eye, cutting the flesh to the skull. The judge was not knocked down, however, but rose and walked unaided to the house, a distance of a quarter of a mile. When he arrived there he was very bloody but he would not send for a physician, but dressed the would himself. It was a narrow escape, but the judge is now all right.

The people of the Daviston vicinity witness ed a double burial a few days since at Friend-ship cemetery, the circumstances surrounding which are singular, and are about these: Two mothers gave birth to twins about the same time, one of each of the twins died on the same day and about the same hour, and they were buried at the same place at about the same time by the same people, and yet their parents live in opposite directions from the cometery.

There is one scupperneng vine in the garden of an Athens gentleman which several years ago produced 100 gallons of wine. THE MUDDLE IN COWETA. The City Court Question in the Late Pri-been S31 for retaining the court, against 737 for abolishing it.

Newnan, Ga., August 10.—[Special.]—
Through the hasty and thoughtless action of the democratic executive committee of Coweta county, our political muddle is exceedingly complicated. They called a primary election to be held July 31st to nominate representatives to the legislature. At the same time, contrary to all precedents, they submitted the question of either "amending" or "abolishing" the city court of Newnan. In the primary, which was strictly a democratic affair, there was a total vote of 1,568 cast, 737 of which were for "abolishing," and 639 for "amending" the city court. There were 152 votes cast in favor of having the court remain as it is, but these votes were thrown out by the committee, thus declaring it the sentiment of the majority in the election to have the city court abolished. Had the tickets be en printed right, so the people in the primary could have voted "for" or "against" the court, the result would have been 831 for retaining the court, against 737 for abolishing it.

A great many who voted in the primary are more wedded to the question of retaining the court than they are to the two nominees, and, although they like to stand by the nominees, yet they do not feel disposed to follow the blunders of a committee when it goes outside of its duty to deal with a matter contrary to all party precedents and against the principles of true democracy. They claim, and justly, too, that a primary election is not the time and place to decide any legislative measure; that the question is not a partisan one, but a question of legislation in which all the people are interested. They cite the prohibition question voted upon in Fulton county last year as an illustration and ask, was that question settled by a fractional minority or a majority of all the voters in the county? They say, further, that it being strictly a local matter, and affecting all the people of the county alike, that it cannot be disposed of at a primary election. In the election they had they did not have a majority of the votes east favoring it, yet the nominees, Jones and Atkinsen, say they are pledged by the results of that election, as declared by the committee, to abolish the city court, if elected.

But their election is the mestion. Those who opposed the city court marshaled all their strength in that election and had the votes been counted, as the parties intended them to be—that is, the 192 who were in favor of letting it remain as it is—they would have beaten the opposition. A great many men say that this is no party issue but purely legislative,

Besides, it is generally known that both the nominees, throughout their canvass, and up to the time the election returns were all in, favored retaining the city court but since the comed retaining the city court, but since the com-mittee decided that the majority were in favor of "abolishing" as against "amending" the bill, they pledge themselves to have the court

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., August 10 .- [Special.]—The firemen have been throwing water all day on the ruins of the terrible fire which Only four buildings on the entire west side of the square on Market street, between 6th and 7th, remain standing and some of them are badly damaged. Right Side Up, With Care. The democracy of Fulton county again stands squarely on its bottom, and the lesson of the past week is good ground for the hope that it will always be found right side up, with care.

Public sentiment caused the committee, at its meeting yesterday, to reconsider without a dissenting voice, what it had done over earnest protest and significant warning. It was the people's love for justice and fairness that called the committee to account for its action, and the same sentiment will give it credit for yielding to the demand which was made of it.

It is to be regretted that the committee did not fix for both elections to take place at the same time. The primary called is only for senator, the three members of the house to be voted for at a later day. The latter nomination must be made very shortly after that for senator, as the general election takes place but little over a month after the senatorial primary. Thus the people of the county will be required to go through two elections, in quick succession, for the choice of one legislative ticket. We confess we do not see the party policy in this.

The triumph of the party in the contest for the great principle which has occupied the attention of the democracy of the state, for the past week, is a matter for genuine gratification and the result will show itself in the restoration of party harmony.

The Late Mr. Blaine.

The most rapid politician and the most rapid steamer of the age caused a double disappointment to a crowd of republican boomers in New York by their tardy arrival.

The steamer was late because it was new, and its machinery was untried. Mr. Blaine has recently contracted the habit of being late because he is old, and his machinery has been tried too often.

What would have been, under favorable circumstances, the greatest demonstration ever een on this continent was spoiled by being split in two. Mr. Blaine was conf dently expected Wednesday afternoon. He failed to come, and all day Thursday the crowd looked for him. When the demonstration could no longer be delayed the affair was turned into an ovation to Morton. At last, on Friday morning, the steamer put in its appearance, and the weary remnant of Blaine's admirers worked themselves into a flurry of enthusiasm.

But it was too late. When champagne is uncorked the second time it may be champagne, but the sparkle, the effervescence, the fizz are wanting. So it is with the second installment of popular enthusi-more remarkable because, in spite of his letters and telegrams declining a nomination, he is virtually a defeated candidate-a man who failed to get there. But it is not surprising that the republicans should jubilate over him all the same. The End of a Celebrated Case

The death of Brooks, alias Maxwell, on the gallows at St. Louis yesterday morning, ends a case of international celebrity.

About three years ago two young English ourists took rooms at the Southern hotel in St. Louis. They were friends and spent much of their time together. In the course of a few days both disappeared. Upon entering the room of one of them, Mr. Preller, his body, horribly mutilated, was found packed in a trunk. On his breast was pinned a paper bearing the words, "So Perish All Traitors to a Great Cause." Suspicion attached to the dead man's friend, Maxwell, and he was hunted down, and finally arrested in New Zealand. At the time of his arrest he had Preller's money and jewelry on his person. He was brought to St. Louis, where he was tried and convicted. It turned out that his real name was Brooks, and a detective who was put in the same cell extorted a full confession from him. Brooks, upon his trial, stated that he was a surgeon, and that Preller engaged him to perform a very delicate operation. While under the influence of chloroform the patient suddenly expired, and Brooks, in his excitement and alarm, got drunk and did many foolish things. Being without money, he took Preller's, and pinned the inscription about traitors to the dead man's breast to throw the police off the track. He then tried to make his escape. His story was disbelieved, and, after several trials, appeals, respites and a request for delay from the British government, the unfortunate man

During his long imprisonment he was twice visited by his father, a respectable school teacher, who came all the way from England to see him, and during the last few weeks of his life he was comforted by the presence of his mother and sister, who were firm believers in his innocence.

Brooks met his fate with great coolness and courage, and to the very last talked

The case has excited great interest in England and America, and some people will always believe that Brooks, or Maxwell, told the truth when he said that Preller was accidentally killed in a surgical opera

The Yellow Fever. According to our dispatches, the yellow fever at Jacksonville and other points in Florida is about to take the shape of an epidemic. Naturally, in view of this, there is considerable excitement in our sea-coast cities, and Brunswick, Savannah and Charleston are making arrangements to protect themselves as best they may. In its origin and progress, yellow fever is a very mysterious disease, and all that science has been able to do is to interpose the barrier of sanitation. Sometimes this is effectual, and sometimes it is ineffectual; but where sanitation fails, a rigid system of quarantine rarely fails. The epidemic in Savannah in 1876 no doubt had its origin in a ship-load of ballast discharged near the wharves of the Savannah, Florida and Western railway. From this point the infection spread southward and westward, until it enveloped the entire city.

In this case, mere sanitation was no barrier to the spread of the disease. It made its way slowly, but surely, from house to house, and from street to street. The health officers worked night and day, and the city authorities gave them all the aid in their power. The city was as clean as it ever has been or ever will be, and the most powerful disinfectants were lavishly employed. Nevertheless, the fever held its course until frost killed the germs.

There has always been a controversy be tween those who believe that the disease can be kept out by a system of rigid quarantine, and those who believe that sanitation is effectual. The probability is, however, that sanitation is more effectual when it is backed up by a system of quarantine. A Brazilian doctor, who has had much experience with yellow fever, suggests the horrible theory that the yellow fever germs exist wherever the victims of the disease are buried, and that they make their way to the surface periodically-sometimes in ten metimes in twenty, according as the years, so seasons are propitious or unpropitious.

This suggestion may do for the tropics, but it will not do for this country, and it may be discarded as the mere fancy of a physician. On the Atlantic coast a rigid quarantine has heretofore been sufficient to keep out the disease, and we have no doubt that it will be as efficient in the future as it has been in the past.

Happily those who believe in sanitation. as well as those who believe in quarantine, are working together, and we have no doubt that the spread of the disease can be effectually prevented. Moreover, the local authorities in the infected cities have the active and sympathetic aid of the federal government, and this means a good deal in Temperance and the Whisky Tax.

Two or three years ago, the democrats of Georgia were unanimous in favor of the abolition of the internal revenue system. Still, the plumed knight has good reason | Three legislatures pentioned congress the unconditional repeal of the system, and to be proud of his reception. It was a high compliment to him, and it was all the the unconditional repeal of the system, and it will not do to say that the members of these bodies were not in carpast or that they these bodies were not in earnest or that the passed their resolutions in a perfunctory way. The whole question was up before them, and they joined THE CONSTITUTION in denouncing the whole scheme as undemocratic, unpatriotic and un-American.

But now we are told that the government tax on whisky acts as a restriction on the traffic. That this point is not well taken appears from the figures furnished by the government, which show that the receipts from the internal revenue are continually increasing. During the fiscal year ending last year there was an increase of about five and a half million dollars over the year previous, and this increase was mostly in the items of spirits and fermented liquors. This increase was in the whole country.

In Georgia there has been a most marked increase in the collections on whisky, although Georgia is largely a temperance state. "If the ratio of increase for July is kept up," says Collector Crenshaw, "the year will show an increase of $75,000." This increase is mainly on whisky, and it shows how the government tax steps in and interferes with local option.

The internal revenue system must go. THE organs lead us to believe that Candidate Harrison is a much gloomier person than Brother Blaine.

HERE IS THE latest divorce puzzle in New York. The case is this: A husband who had been divorced from his wife married her again and now wants a second divorce. ROBERT G. INGERSOLL occupies fifteen pages n this month's number of the North American Review to reply to his critics, whose views were given in The American three weeks ago. The reply is in the usual Ingersollian vein. This is conclusion: "The champions of Christianity must show that the Bible tells the truth about the creation of man, the Garden of Eden, the temptation, the fall and the flood.
They must take the ground that the sacred book is historically correct; that the events re-others to commit murder.

were actually performed; that the laws pro-mulgated from Sinai were and are wise and just, and that nothing is upheld, commanded indorsed, or in any way approved or sustained that is not absolutely right. In other words, if they insist that a being of infinite goodne and intelligenc is the author of the Bible, they must be ready to show that it is absolutely perfect. They must defend its astronomy, geology, history, miracle and morality. If the Bible is true, man is a special creation, and if a man is a special creation, millions of facts must have transpired, millions of ages ago, to deceive the scientific world of today. If the Bible is true, slavery is right, and the world should go back to the barbarism of the lash and chain. If the Bible is true, polygamy is the highest form of virtue. If the Bible is true, nature has a master, and the miraculous is independent of and superior to cause and effect. If the Bible is true, most of the children of men are destined to suffer eternal pain. If the Bible is true, the science known as astronomy is a collection of mistakes - the telescope false witness and light is a luminous liar. If the Bible is true, the science known as geogy is false and every fossil is a petrified per jurer. The defenders of orthodox creeds should have the courage to candidly answer at least two questions: 1. Is the Bible inspired? 2. Is the Bible true? And when they answer these questions, they should remember that if the ble is true, it needs no inspiration, and that if not true, inspiration can do it no good," The same old sing song argument and abuse. THE NEW YORK WORLD has the following to say of a question in which all railroad men and travelers are interested: Seventy-five miles an hour-or a mile in forty-eight seconds is the astounding rate of speed which has just been attained by the "West Coast Express," of the London and Northwestern railway, on its trip from the English to the Scotch metropolis. The record of the "Flying Scotchman," which has hitherto been known as the fastest train in the world, has now been broken, and it is scarcely likely that for some time any attempt will be made to surpass the West Coast express. Of course such lightning speed could only be attained on the most perfectly laid and carefully tended permanent way, as, apart from everything else, the strain on the rails, especially at the curves, must have been terrific. It is easy to realize the sensations of the London correspondent of the New York Times, who was on board the steam racer, when in graphic language he describes the telegraph poles as appearing like an unbroken row of fence-posts, and tunnels like gas jets suddenly extinguished and as suddenly relighted before the eye has time to accustom itself to the darkness. Railway experts will read with feelings of undisguised admiration about the unbroken run of 158 miles without a halt-the longest in the world-being twelve miles-longer than the Fort Wayne and Chicago

An Interesting Point in Court as to Liability for Debts

Of the Hospital-Some Testimony From th Inside-The Faculty of the Southern Medical College Questioned, Etc.

An interesting point in regard to the livy Street Hospital is about to be decided in court The point is an interesting one to quite number of people for the simple fact there are a number of outstanding debts against the hospital and the question at issue is as to the liability of the Southern Medical college for those debts.

About ten days ago suit on an account of $55 was brought by Mr. Jas. M. Coleman, the commission merchant on North Broad street. It was developed here that there was no suc incorporation as the Ivy street hospital and a notion was made to dismiss the suit.

Judgment was postponed for two or three days and the point was then raised that the judge could not render a decision at that term The suit as drawn yesterday was against the Southern Medical college for provisions furnished the Ivy street hospital. Mr. James Mayson represented Mr. Cole-man and Colonel Broyles represented the hos-

the only advantage they derived from this being that the students were given bedside instruction. The intent of his testimony was the same as that of Dr. Gaston.

Mr. Mayson read from an article printed recently in the Atlanta papers, in which it is stated that the purpose of the faculty in interesting themselves in the hospital was to furnish "food and sledter" to the sick.

"Is that true?" asked Mr. Mayson.

"Yes," said Dr. Nicolson.
Dr. Wooley was examined next, and his testimony merely corroborated that of the members of the faculty.

Lowry. It seems that he has been acting as steward at the hospital for a year or more. He testified that the hospital had been under the control of the college faculty, that no professors other than the professors of the Southern Medical college, nor students other than those of the same institution, visited the hospital.

Deput was the superintendent of the Powell was the superintendent of the "Dr. Powell was the superintendent of the hospital," said Lowry, "and I was under his orders and those of the faculty. It was my understanding always that the hospital belonged to the college and the faculty of the college were in charge of it."

Dr. Gaston was put upon the stand once "What is Lowry's character?" asked Mr.

"I must say that it was bad," said the doc-"Would you believe him on oath?"

"No, sir."
Dr. Nicolson and Dr. Wooley also testified that they would not believe Lowry on eath.
Mr. Mayson then read from the catalogue of the hospital for 87-88 a paragraph in which occurs the phrase "the Ivy Street Hospital of the Southern Medical College." "What does that mean?" asked Mr. Mayson.

the Southern Medical College. "What does that mean?" asked Mr. Mayson.

Dr. Gaston explained that it meant simply that students at the college were given the benefit of bedside instruction in the hospital.

Dr. Wooley and Dr. Nicolson explained Dr. Wooley and Dr. Ricoson expanded the matter in pretty much the same way.

Dr. Powell was examined next. He pretty thoroughly covered the ground already gone over as to the relation existing between hospital and college, and giving his opinion of Lowry.

"Why, Lowry's name hasn't been on the pay roll in over a year," said Dr. Powell. "He used to be janitor at the college, but has been hanging round the hospital here lately. He was not an agent of the college, he was not authorized to buy the goods for the payment of which this suit is brought, and I didn't know that any such goods had been bought until the bill was presented."

"Didn't you frequently send him aiter provisions?" asked Mr. Mayson.

"Yes," said Dr.Powell, "but I always signed the order. I did my trading with Mickleberry, always depend on the provision of the provision of the content of the provision of the content of the provision o and he had orders to send nothing to the "Didn't Lowry go about soliciting donations for the hospital?"

"Yes, and that's where I thought all these things came from," said the doctor. "Now there are several bills over the town like this;

and, yet, Lowry told me all the time that these goods were being donated."
"What did Lowry get for all that?"
"Nothing but presents. Then his wife is matron of the hosdital, and we let him stay on that account.'

"Who was steward of the hospital? "There was no steward. In the directory Lowry is put down as steward, but he did that himself and had no right to do it."
The doctor testified on this line at some length, the idea being that Lowry had bought the goods on his own responsibility and that he was responsible for them. But the most interesting witness was Mrs. Lowry, the matron

"Do you remember," she was asked, "that the provisions mentioned in the account actually came to Ivy street hospital?"

"No, sir."

A letter was here introduced, signed by Mrs. Lowry, addressed to Dr. Powell, and to the effect that she (Mrs. Lowry) was willing that the money due her be used to pay the debts of her husband. The letter further stated that she supposed Lowry must have been drunk at the time the goods were ordered, as he had no authority to huy goods for the as he had no authority to buy goods for the

All this was signed by Mrs. Lowry. "How came you to sign that?"

"How came you to sign that?" she was asked.

"Dr. Powell had it already written out and told me to sign it. He said he could send Lowry to jail if he wanted to and he just frightened me nearly to death. I didn't want to see Lowry in jail, and I just told him if Lowry owed any debts for me or him to use my money and pay them."

At the conclusion of Mrs. Lowry's examination Dr. Powell was put upon the stand again. He denounced as false the statement that any provisions had been sent from the hospital to his plantation, and stated that the only thing ever sent to his house was a small slice of venison that Lowry told him had been donated to the hospital. The doctor was very explicit upon these points and left no room for doubt that he was very much in earnest.

Mr. Mayson then laid down the propositions.

Mr. Mayson then laid down the propositions forming the basis of his client's claim, that the provisions were actually used in the hospital, and that the Southern Medical college is responsible for the debts of the hospital.

The case was then postponed until 11 o'clock this morning at which time the arguments will be heard and judgment rendered.

Perhaps not, but if you want to buy a song just for the fun of the thing, here are a few of the suggestive titles you can choose from: "Our President—Tried and True," No diagram goes with the musical contribution, and Cleveland is the hero, sure. Another one has the suggestive title of "Wait Till November." This is purely political and refers to the election which has been booked for that month. Both parties will accept this song and its advice to wait. "Holler Fraud" is the title of another one that was probably carried over from previous campaigns, but it won't be used as a re ublican jubilee this time. "The Mugwumps Met Him on the Way," tells in musical measure of a his-torical event, and the mugwump sings a deep basso part in the musical gem. The repertoire includes an antique, slow-time medley, entitled "We've Got 'Em on the List." This song probably refers to a certain grade of postmasters and was suggested by President Cleveland's conduct during the first two vears of his term.

Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen of the Executive Committee: Baving seen more winters than any other of the committee, I claim the right first to be heard. I will be brief, as I am no speaker. I will will give you a few words of admonition. No man can tell me anything about the corroption and frauds that have been practiced heretofore in primaries in Atlanta. I had the honor of voting for the first mayor of Atlanta. My partner, H. C. Holcomb, was elected a member of the first council. It is high time for a reformation, let us today inaugurate a plan for primaries in which money and whisky will be discarded, and the man who attempts to use either for the purpose of carrying his election should have the seel of condemnation. I am not for Hammond; I am not for Rice; I am for right and for justice and an honest ballot; one that has not been purchased by money. This is a day of combinations, pools, rings and trusts.

If elections are to be controlled by money, who knows but what some time in the future a combination may be formed by which a Murat or Robespiere may get in power, and take your liberties in the future is to guard well the ballot box. See that nothing unclean goes in it.

The Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, the distinguished lecturer and preacher, and his son are guests at the Kimball house.

They reached Atlanta yesterday afternoon at 6 o'clock and will remain in the city till 3 o'clock this afternoon, when they will go to Salt Springs. Dr. Talmage will pronounce a lecture at Chautauqua tonight and will preach a sermon in the tabernacle tomorrow morning. Dr. Talmage is much stouter than when ha ectured in Atlanta six years ago and decidedly slanders on the doctor. The cartoonists to the contrary notwithstanding, the Brooklyn preacher is a handsome man. His face is bright, is perpetually irradiated by a smile; his voice is cheery and his manners are fascinating. He is a living exemplification of the truth of his favorite saying—"Tis better to look on the bright side." Dr. Talmage is an optimist in the best sense of that term. His good fellowship is contagious, and he possesses the happy faculty of making those in his company feel at ease. His cordiality exercises restraint, loosens out all ctiffness. A fluent talker, he is likewise a charming conversationalist. He can listen as well as talk; but foolish is he who would talk when he might hear Dr. Talmage.

"Where are you from, doctor?" was the way the interviewer opened the conversation. "That is not easy to tell," replied the doctor, "for I have been so many places, have covered so much territory that it is hard to keep track of my movements. I have been in the west, have delivered lectures in various cities and at various Chautanqua assemblies. And yet all this time I have deluded myself with the notion that I was taking a vacation."

"What about politics?" abruptly asked the visitor.

"What about politics?" abruptly asked the visitor.

The answer took the form of a rippling laugh. There was a very short pause, and Dr. Talmage said: "I do not know much about politics. I have never taken a partisan interest in politics. I have in the pulpit discussed great moral and economic problems, but I never went on the platform or talked from the hustings. I discussed the questions from an independent, non-partisan point of view, and was not handicapped by being allied with any party. I confess to you that my love for the two parties is infinitessimal."

"But you have had good opportunities for observing the progress of the canvass. What do you think will be the result?"

"There is only one being in the universe whe knows, and he is the Lord Almighty. Wherever I have been I have been impressed with one great principle. It is this: Every democrat is certain Cleveland will be triumphantly elected, and every republican is equally as sure of Harrison's success. In Indiana where I have recently been I saw the most enthusiasm that I ever witnessed before. This is Harrison's state and the enthusiasm was for him. The whole state is ablaze with enthusiasm, This is regarded as one of the most important fields and here the contest will be stubborn. Nobedy can say, however, how the state will go. The same of New York. Who can say how that state will vote? There are so many causes which affect the popular vote and change the result at the last moment, that it is foolish in anyone to essay to forecast the political horoscope."

political horoscope."
"What about the candidates?"
"Harrison is is one of the best and purest men in the United States. His private life is unassailable. Nobody has said or can say aught against him. He is a Christian gentleman, a prohibitionist, a tectotler. For this reason he will receive the votes of thousands man, a prominionist, a tecture. For this reason he will receive the votes of thousands of temperance people who are satisfied with him as an exponent of their views. And now a word for Cleveland. He is my friend, and my regard for him is high. He is an honest, conscientious man and has given the country a safe, quiet, respectable administration. It may not have been a brilliant administration, but the country does not want brilliant and flashy administrations. Cleveland is immensely strong with his party. It is true that he has provoked to anger many democrats, but all of them will come to his support. He has pursued a conclliatory policy toward the republicans, and many of them will vote for him. Now a word about Fiske. He is a most excellent gentleman in all respects. Able and pure, and the exponent of a party which possesses no inconsiderable numerical strength. possesses no inconsiderable numerical strength in such states as New York, Maine and Kan-sas; he will poll a large vote. How this will affect the vote for the other candidates it is ever, that most prohibitionists in the north are ever, that most promotionists in the north are republicans."

"Then you will not hazard a prediction?"

"No. There may happen things which will upset all our calculations. I was certain that Hancock would beat Garfield. A few weeks before the election it was felt by all—even the republicans felt it—that Hancock must inevitably be elected. But soon there was a change. Just how it came about nobody knows. Garfield was elected and all our prophesies came to naught. Public opinion is capricious; it is very peculiar. It is like the tides of the ocean. It is, like them, controlled by some higher, some mysterious power. The simile is absolutely perfect, only public opinion cannot be recovered like the tides. So I will come back to where I started—there is only one being in the universe who knows how the election will result, and that is the Lord Almighty."

The committee have decided upon a primary election, to be held on August 25th, and conducted upon he following plan:

It is the sense of this committee that in the coming primary election and in all future primaries the use of money to inducate voters in any shape, in the form of treating, hiring workers, running carriages, etc., be condemned and forbidden, and all candidates are required to discard and discountenance the same, either by themselves or others, either directly or indirectly.

Judge Anderson did not think it was yet time to allow colored men to vote in primaries.
There are none knocking at the democratic deer. It would be time enough to left the door. It would be time enough to let the colored men vote when a considerable number of them requested to be allowed to join the democratic party of Fulton.

That part of the story is all right. Mr. Franklin has a perfect right to retail liquor at that price, and men have a perfect right to drink it at that price.

But the revenue laws require that when a barrel of whisky has been emptied, even at four cents a drink, the revenue stamp upon said barrel must be scratched. The object of the law is to remove from men engaged in the business the strong temptation to refill the barrel without having it restamped.

Deputy Marshal Johnson, in his rounds, discovered four empty whisky barrels in Mr Franklin's saloon with unscratched stamps upon them.

Mr. Franklin was arrested yesterday morning and arraigned before Commissioner Will Haight on a charge of breaking the revenue laws.

Mr. Franklin stated that he furnished the

This is the first case of the kind which Commissioner Haight has tried.

Monganton, N. C., October 15, 1887.—Hunnicutt Rheumatic Cure Co., Atlanta, Ga.—Gentlemen: For some three years I have been a great sufferer from Sciatica and Muscular Rheumatism. I tried a number of good doctors and many remedies, but failed to get relief. About three months ago, when I had become so enleebled from loss of sleep and severe pains, that I had about given up all hope of recovery, my attention was directed to your Rheumatic Cure, and although I had but little idea of being benefitted thereby, I determined to give it a fair trial, and before I had finished the second bottle I felt; some rellief—I slept more and was more restful, I am now taking the tenth bottle, but am able to sleep all night, and feel much refreshed in the morning; and while mine has been a terrible stubborn case, it has yielded gradually to the treatment, and I am very hopeful that in a few more weeks I shall be able to dispense with my crutches and walk erect without any pain. I do most cheerfully recommend the H.R. C. to those who are suffering from the dread and painful effect of this most dreadful disease. I cannot express the degree of gratitude I feel to you, gentlemen, for your kindness and the very great service you have rendered me in my afflictions. I pray God's blessings upon you in your efforts to relieve the afflicted. Very truly, C. M. ANDERSON.

than the best rubber hose. Made on the same principle as the rubber-lined hose used in fire departments, which last for years. The cotton duck used in all rubber hose draws in water, wherever exposed, as in wick absorbs oil, and being confined by rubber generates a sulphurous gas, juickly destroying the best rubber hose. The 'Spiral' Hose, having no outside covering to imprison the moisture, will dry like a towel. There are imitations, so buy only that which has one red line running through it, and which is orended "Spiral," patented March 30, '80. If your lealer does not have it in stock, let him get it. THE DUNNINGS AGAIN.

Susie Dunning Dies Yesterday at 1:20 in the Afternoon.

The Coroner Notified and an Inquest to be Held-The Old Woman Left Alone-At the House Last Night.

Susie Dunning is dead.

The name is familiar in Atlanta as that of the most notorious miscegenatist that has fig-ured here in years. The story of her marriage to the young negro, Green Jackson, and of his subsequent trial in Judge Manning's court upon the charge of having received a part of the money stolen from the old lady, were re-called a few days ago by the death of Matilda

Dunning.
It is the general opinion with the police and detectives that Matilda's death was a violent one. The black spots over the body, the suddenness of her death, and every circumstance connected with the matter tended to strength-connected with the matter tended to strengthen the theory.

Suste was thought to be dying when Matilda died, and this in itself was regarded as another evidence of foul play. The old lady was sick and unable to take care of herself, and the family was left almost entirely in the hands of their negro neighbors and relatives.

Among these was Green Jackson's mother. Matilda was decently buried in Westview. That night there was a wild time at the Widow Dunning's. The old lady was drunk—that is to say, she was drunker than usual, and the neighbors were drunk. Over the body of the

is to say, she was drunker than usual, and the neighbors were drunk. Over the body of the dead girl blows were actually exchanged, and the drunken profanity and abuse were something horrible.

Susie lingered until yesterday, and died. The old woman was drunk still, and the family exposed as it has been for some time to the mercies of their negro neighbors.

So the theory of four play is stronger than over.

ever.

As soon as the death became known yester-day, Detectives Redford, Buchanan and Cason, and Patrolman Walton, went out to the house and began investigating. They remained at-and began investigating. They remained at the house all night.

The scene at the Dunning home, a little two-room shasty at the end of Newton street, was well in keeping with the Dunning story.

One room was closed.

That was where the body lay.

In the other room sat old Mrs. Dunning, bare-footed, slovenly dressed, and mandlindrunk. A very old woman sat in the deor way, and in the room was another neighbor, a Mrs. Murphy.

The detectives were standing near the door.
Beside Mrs. Dunning was a table, and on it, besides the lamp and candles, was a large bottle, holding possibly a half gallon or more of port wine.

"O-h! O-h! The two of 'em is gene. O-h!"

The old woman rocked back and forth. She was not crying and did not seem to be particularly affected.

"Faith, an' I'll go after Dinny," said the neighbor.
"The divil an' hell wid Dinny," said Mrs.

unning. "You'd aggervate a saint wid Murphy, he is."
"No, the hell he is," was the chaste retort,
"but Dinny ain't no nigger, Mistress Dunning."

"Pity he ain't. You're a fool, you are, anyhow."
The old woman turned her back on her visitor.

"Now, I'll tell you," she remarked presently to Detective Buchanan, who had just come in, "the fus' one give me—everything—everything—but this one—oh, me."

She began mumbling and shaking her head.

"What did this one do?"

"Blessed be to God." interrupted the neighbor, "an' so she did all day 'till she died."
"Ah, me," said the old woman, "there's hell to pay for all this. I'll tell you." turning to the detective again, "I'll tell you."
She began mumbling again, but it was impossible to understand her.

Then she began mumbling again.

In the other room the body was lying upon an undertaker's stretcher. A satin sheet covered the body.

The face was covered with a hankerchief. "Drop that," exclaimed the old woman as she entered the room. "I let 'em raise the cloth before an' she turned black, she did." She jerked the satin cloth from the neigh-bor's hands and dropped it over the body bor's hands and dropped it over the body again.

THE NEIGHBORS TALK.

"What was the matter with Susie?"

"Heaven only knows. What was the matter with the other one? She died, didn't she? Well, that's what's the matter with this one. That's all anybody knows. I believe the niggers poisoned both of 'em an' the ole woman is going pretty soon. You mark what I tell you. Then they'll be askin' what's the matter with the old woman."

A number of them expressed themselves in this way.

"The old woman is crazy," said another. "She is as silly as a baby, an' the niggers know it. They say she has been throwin' money aroun' shameful."

A noticeable feature last night was that not negro came to the house after the detectives arrived.

THE OTHER GIRL.

It was stated last night that the other girles was dead. This is Maggie, the eldest of the three daughters. She married a negro named Peacock several years ago, and has been living in Ohio since. It was to her home in Spring field that Susie went when she ran away and married the negro, and it was there that $1,600 was squandered in a few months.

The foundation for the report was a telegran received here yesterday from Springfield.

The plot is thickening.

The acting coroner, Judge Manning, wa notified of Susie Dunning's death last night and an inquest will be held this morning.

was not crying and did not seem to be particularly affected.
"Faith, an' I'll go after Dinny," said the "The divil an' hell wid Dinny," said Mrs. Dunning. "You'd aggervate a saint wid Dinny Murphy. He's like the divil is Dinny Murphy, he is."

"No, the hell he is," was the chaste retort,
"but Dinny ain't no nigger, Mistress Dun-

ning."
"Pity he ain't. You're a fool, you are, anyhow."
The old woman turned her back on her visitor.

"Now, I'll tell you," she remarked presently to Detective Buchanan, who had just come in, "the fus' one give me—everything—everything—but this one—oh, me."

She began mumbling and shaking her head.
"What did this one do?"

The old woman moved her lips as if trying to articulate the word "ma."

"Blessed be to God," interrupted the neighbor, "an' so she did all day 'till she died."

She began mumbling again, but it was impossible to understand her. That Susie was a good girl, she was," said

"Oh, the hell."
Then the old lady uncorked the large bottle. filled a glass nearly full, and drank it. The neighbor followed suit. The older woman did

'I give a nigger girl five dollars." continued the old woman, "to cook me some steak."
Then she began mumbling again.
In the other room the body was lying upon an undertaker's stretcher. A satin sheet cov-

The face was covered with a hankerchief.

"Prop that," exclaimed the old woman as she entered the room. "I let 'em raise the cloth before an she turned black, she did."

THE NEIGHBORS TALK.

"What was the matter with Suse?"

"Heaven only knows. What was the matter with the other one? She died, didn't she? Well, that's what's the matter with this one. That's all anybody knows. I believe the niggers poisoned both of 'em an' the ole woman is going pretty soon. You mark what I tell you. Then they'll be askin' what's the matter with the old woman."

A number of them expressed themselves in this way.

"The old woman is crazy," said another. "She is as silly as a baby, an' the niggers know it. They say she has been throwin' money aroun' shameful."

It was stated last night that the other girl was dead. This is Maggie, the eldest of the three daughters. She married a negro named Peacock several years ago, and has been living in Ohio since. It was to her home in Spring-Galdahat Susia went when she ran away and Peacock several years ago, and has been living in Ohio since. It was to her home in Springfield that Susie went when she ran away and married the negro, and it was there that $1,600 was squandered in a few months.

The foundation for the report was a telegram received here yesterday from Springfield.

The plot is thickening.

The acting coroner, Judge Manning, was notified of Susie Dunning's death last night, and an inquest will be held this morning.

The detectives are hard at work and there may be another chapter in the Dunning story.

The Cases Against P. & G. T. Dodd. EDITORS CONSTITUTION: We notice the ard of P. & G. T. ABOUT THE RAILROADS

The Directors of the Atlanta and Florida Meet Today.

Mr. Aaron Haas and the Presidency of Atlanta's Promising Railroad-The Atlanta and Florida.

The directors of the Atlanta and Florida road will meet at 10 o'clock this morning. The election of a president to succeed the late Colonel John N. Dunn will be an important feature of the meeting, The selection of a route for the extension of the road southward will come up for discussion, and an order for the surveys will probably be made.

The presidency of the road will undoubtedly be tendered Mr. Aaron Haas, vice-president, who has since the death of Colonel Dunn

That Mr. Hass will give the Atlanta and Florida careful and valuable service if he is elected president, goes without saying with Florida careful and valuable service if he is elected president, goes without saying with those who are acquainted with Mr. Haas and his business ability. He has, from the inception of the road, been prominent in all its affairs, and has thoroughly acquainted himself with its needs and prospects. Mr. Haas has many strong friends among the stockholders of the Atlanta and Florida and they appreciate his efforts in behalf of the road and the success he has met with in securing increased equipments.

Mr. Haas is also in a position to give the road the attention and management it should receive to properly develop it, and his letter, which was read at the stockholders' meeting in this city on Wednesday last, shows clearly his policy and his appreciation of what is necessary to make the line a paying one.

If Mr. Haas should be selected to fill this important position he will probably have the assistance of a first-class railroad man, though this has not been definitely decided upon. The stockholders may rest assured, however, that their property will be ably managed and will yield as satisfactory returns as can possibly be secured.

Just at present there is no road in Georgia so full of promise as the Atlanta and Florida, and every business interest in this city will be benefitted by its extension and future prosperity. The Constitution and will keep its readers fully informed as to its progress and hoped-for presperity.

The Future of the Road.

hoped-for presperity. The Future of the Road. Speaking of the Atlanta and Florida, the Atlanta agent of a western road said to a Constitu-tion reporter yesterday, in answer to a question as to what would be the future of the road: "I believe the Atlants and Florida, if it is built to idewater over the route outlined in THE CONSTITU

TON a few days ago, will be a very valuable line, not only to Atlanta and her business interests, but to the whole section it will open up and develop." to the whole section it will open up and develop."

"Do you think it will long remain a local road?"

"Of course that will depend to a great extent on its revenue and its relations to established systems. A railroad, like every other kind of property, has its prices, and should the Atlanta and Florida prove too strong a competitor for existing lines it would be bought up if possible."

"You think a route to the sea coast at Brunswick is a good one for the Atlanta and Florida?"

"Undoubtedly. It would tap a virgin country, with a wealth of thinker, the transportation of which would furnish a big revenue and the development that would follow would insure a permanent and paying business."

Georgia's New Roads.

Georgia's New Roads.

Athens, Ga., August 10.—[Special.]—Our city is clated over authentic information received that work has been resumed in carnest on the Georgia, Carolina and Northern raflroad, and it will be mpleted to Athens and Atlanta as fast as men and oney can move the dirt. Contracts are now being out this side of Chester, S. C., and all the leading droad builders are putting in bids. A gentleman, who is thoroughly posted on southern railroad affairs, tells The Constitution correspondent that while the Georgia, Carolina and Northern people have not as yet negotiated their bends, they have made arrangements to get all the money needed to build the line. They are moving onward quietly and with as hittle publisher results to the constitution of the constitutio build the line. They are moving onward quictly and with as little publicity as possible, lest something should occur to again interrupt the completion of their read. The Richmond and Danville syndicate is naturally antagonistic to this line, for it will take lusiness from it from the time the train leaves Mouroe until it enters the earshed at Atlanta.

The Macon and Covington road is fast nearing completion. The road is graded within our incorposate limits, the bridge across the Oceance and all the treatling built, and the from laid within two miles of Watkinsville, and in about ten of Athens, Engineer Roberts says he can have the cars running into our city in nine clays. There is a little bitch about Athens paying for the right of way for this road through the city, as our council agreed to do when the line was diverted from Covington to this city. Athens is certainly in henor bound to donate this right of way, and if the money can be raised by teaction we believe our citizens would vote it by an overwhelming majority; but there is a legal hitted right here. When

It the money can be raised by faxation we believe our citizens would vote it by an overwhelming majority; but there is a legal hitch right here. When it comes to voluntary subscription from a people who know that an enterprises assured them, it will be rather an up-bill work to collect the twenty thousand dollars necessary. This road will greatly benefit Athens, if in no other manner than by working a great saving in the delivery of freight. It will pass by the doors and furnish sidetracks to the Athens factory, several of our cotton warehouses, the foundry, gas works and planing mills, connecting with the Northeastern dejot. The site for the depotisnow being graded just below Green & Murray's livery stable. It will be on a grade twenty feet higher than the Georgia railroad.

A Railroad Rumor. MACON, Ga., August 10 .- [Special:] - A rumor was heard on the streets today to the effect that the Georgia Southern and Florida railroad had bought the Covington and Macon.

A Constitution reporter called upon President, Willis B. Sparks, of the Macon Construction comany of the Georgia Southern, and inquired of him piny of the design content, and inquired of him-in there was any troth in the report. The gentle-man laughed hearthy at the idea, and said there was not the shightest shadow of tr. th in it, and was at a loss to understand how such reports origi-

B.L. itseems perfectly natural that the Georgia Southern and Covington and Macon should amalga-mate, or at least be closely allied and form links in the great chain that is stretching from Plorids on the south to Balthrore and New York on the north.

The Lost Car Man. Hunting up stray freight cars is a peculiar business, and the gentlemen who are employed in this branch of the railroad service can tell some good stories of their experiences. Mr. P. Rogers, of the great Penusylvania system, is in Atlanta on bus-iness for his road. The Penusylvania system owns over 5,000 freight cars and Mr. Rogers is on the road He keeps a record of the mileage traveled, and says that he averages 60,00 miles a year. He has been in the lost car business for sixteen years, and had traveled 1,454.114 miles up to January of the present year. He is said to have his private mark on nearly all of the rolling stock used on the P-unsylvan a ; s tem, and railroad men say it is a hard matter to keep a car when Mr. Rogers gets after it. Roadmasters' Convention

The sixth annual session of the Roadmasters association of America will be held at Washington, September 11, 12 and 13th. The committee appointed to prepare a program of squestions for appointed to prepare a program: of equestions for discussion at this meeting have submitted the following: 1. Standard track joints. 2. Tonight Dr. T. DeWitt Talmage will lecture at Chautaugua. This announcement in itself ought to fill the immense tabernacle from one end to the other. Dr. Talmage is the highest priced lecturer in America today, and he makes this hurried trip from his pulpit in Brooklyn to lecture tonight at Chautauqua and to preach tomorrow from the Chautauqua pulpit. The sermon that he preaches tomorrow will be telegraphed and printed in five hundred newspapers throughout the country. row will be telegraphed and printed in the hundred newspapers throughout the country, and read by millions of people. This is one of the grandest sermons he has ever prepared, and it will be a memoriable event to have heard it.

The Programme is the strongest that Chantauqua has yet offered. Read it carefully and see the many attractions offered. At half past ten o'clock there will be a concert by the Goshen band, in which "The Hunting Scene" will be played. This is one of the prettiest selections played by the band and is descriptive of a buning scene.

The band will also play "Forge and Forest,"

"Arrival home."

The band will also play "Forge and Forest," another beautiful descriptive piece of music. In the darkness of the night the old 'blacksmith shop, with its ancient forge and bellows, stands quietly in the woods. An occasional flash of lightning discloses its position on the banks of a beautiful, rippling brook. A storm breaks upon the scene with terrific fury; heaven's artillery with its majestic lightning accompaniment, completes the nicture. The storm ceases; morning dawns, birds chipper and sing; the voices of the cuckoo and owl are heard among the feathered songsters; the old grizzly gives a tremendous growl as he peard among the feathered songsters; the old grizzly gives a tremendous growl as he emerges from his deep caverned home below the murmuring waters of the brook. The bell in the village steeple strikes five, and we are reminded that the hour of prayer has arrived. Breakfast over and the brawny arm of the blacksmith is made bare. The fires are lighted, and the "Forge in the Forest," with the sweet music of the anvil, have commenced the toil of the day, which is continued until the shades of evening again throws its mantle o'er creation, and all nature says "Good right"

At 11 o'clock there will be a lecture by Mr.
P. M. Von Finklestein on "City Life Among At 11 o'clock there will be a lecture by Mr. P. M. Von Finklestein on "City Life Among the Jews," illustrated. This will be a genuine treat, and should be largely attended. Mr. Von Finklestein, in his illustrated lecture of yesterday on "The Arabs of Palestine," gave the greatest satisfaction. The lecture was a gem of interest and instruction, and he held his audience to a man from beginning to end. He told of the life of the "Arab," of his habits, medes of living, etc., and illustrated his lecture with living persons, men, women and its, modes of living, etc., and illustrated his lecture with living persons, men, women and children, who sat on the stage attired in the native costume of the "Arab" during the entire lecture. He had on the stage the different cooking utensils used by the "Arabs," as well as other household articles. The lecture was exceedingly novel, splendidly delivered, and intensively interesting and instructive. Today Mr. Von. Finklestein will deliver his lecture on the city life of the Jews, and will illustrate it as he illustrated yesterday's lecture. It will, if possible, be more interesting than his first lecture, and Mr. Von Finklestein will have a large audience, as all who heard him yesterday will be sure to hear him again today. yesterday will be sure to hear him again today.

At 3:30 there is a concert by Vitale and Penelti, the most wonderful performers on the vicilin and harpon the American stage. He has a pre-possessing manner and pleasing delivery, and carries his audience with him from beginning to end. Mr. Vincent is a most accomplished to end. Mr. Vincent is a most accomplished gentleman, and it is said that he delivers more literary lectures at each of the forty-two Chautauquas which are established in the United States than any other lecturer. At 7.15 there will be a musical prelude by Herr Hugo Turpe, the wonderful cornetist. This phenomenal cornet virtuoso had the honored playing before the crowned heads of

This phenomenal cornet virtuose had the honor of playing before the crowned heads of Europe, among them the Emperor William, the crown prince of Germany, the kings of Saxony, Belgium, Holland, also at the expositions of Paris and Brussels, receiving the highest compliments from such eminent musicians as Franz, Liszt, Wagner, Bulow and others. He is the possessor of various medals as awards for musical art and science.

In Boston he performed before an audience of forty thousand people, and from such fastidious critiques as the Bostonians undoubtedly are, he w s pronounced the finest "cornetistiant and world."

In Chicago he received the highest enco-minins through the Tribune, which styled him the "king of cornet players." A Milwaukee paper has it that Levy and the A Milwankee paper has it that Levy and the other celebrities must step into the background when Turpe appears, which means that he is not only a performer but has received the highest musical culture in theory and practice.

At 7:30 Mr. Talmage will deliver his lecture on the "Bright Side of Things," which will close the best programme that has yet been offered at Chautauqua.

Below is given the programme for tomorrow (Sunday) at Chautauqua. Read it carefully, and go out this afternoon, hear Talmage lecture, and remain over and hear him preach tomorrow. It will be a great day at Chautauqua tomorrow, and the Chautauqua grounds and tabernacle should be filled with visitors.
